Kissinger outlines resources program

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger today outlined a six-point program aimed at a more cooperative development of the world's natural resources.

In a speech prepared for a special session of the United Nations General Assembly, the secretary said, "We meet here at a moment when the world economy is under severe stress."

Pointing to the oil crisis, shortage of food grains and increasing global inflation, Kissinger said the solution can come only through a realistic, international effort.

"The great issues of development can no longer be realistically perceived in terms of confrontation between the haves and have nots," he said.

Any effort by the less developed nations to artificially control raw materials "will sooner or later produce the organization of the potential victims into a counterbloc," Kissinger said in a not too subtle warning.

In introducing his six points, the secretary also underlined his belief that the United Nations should avoid grandiose declarations of principles and aim for hard work instead.

"Our goal," he said, "cannot be reached by resolutions alone or prescribed by rhetoric. It must remain the subject of constant, unremitting efforts over the years and decades ahead."

The six points:
—Action must be taken to insure a more equitable supply of oil and other energy products while keeping an inflationary price spiral from occurring.

For its part the United States is willing to help oil-producing nations broaden their economic base as well as sharing technology and aiding in industrialization.

—There must be an end to the cycle of raw material surplus and shortage. But a cartel of raw material producers aimed at forcing up prices "would have serious consequences for all countries," Kissinger said.

The United States proposes a cooperative effort to include "urgent international consideration of restrictions on incentives for the trade in commodities."

This means, the secretary said, that there must be equitable access to supplies of resources as well as access to markets by the producers.

To support this there should be a body of international experts working with the U.N. Divisions of Resources to determine the future supply of natural resources, he said.

—There must be a better balance between food production and population growth.

The United States will share its agricultural technology, including a raise from $258 million to $675 million this year to aid in boosting farming technology.

Kissinger also renewed his call for a World Food Conference.

A major objective, he went on, will be the rebuilding of food surpluses so the world can alleviate famines and other emergency shortages.

Then, the American secretary pledged his government to the establishment of an "International Fertilizer Institute" to help overcome the shortages of fertilizers.

—Steps must be taken to keep the poorer nations from being destroyed by dramatic shifts in the supplies and prices of such raw materials as oil.

"We welcome the steps the oil producers have already taken towards applying their new surplus revenues" to the needs of the poverty-stricken countries.

The United Nations as well as the other industrialized nations must continue an aid program to the underdeveloped world "despite the prospect of unprecedented payments deficits," Kissinger stated.

—Science must be shared and put to greater use to meet "the developing nations two most fundamental problems—unemployment and hunger," the secretary said.

And, Kissinger went on, "the technology of birth control should be improved."

To meet the possibility of a major weather change in much of the world, he proposed existing international organizations "urgently investigate this problem and offer guidelines for immediate international action."

—There must be a new commitment by rich and poorer nations alike to development of an open trading system, a reformed monetary system "and a positive climate for the free flow of resources, both public and private."

Kissinger said the United States is willing to take whatever actions are necessary "to avoid trade and payments restrictions ... keep open its capital markets ... join in an international commitment to pursue responsible fiscal and monetary policies ... open its markets further" to products of the developing countries.

Before his speech, Kissinger was meeting with U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, and afterward he was to attend a luncheon given by Waldheim for visiting foreign officials.

Kissinger also arranged meetings today with several other foreign ministers, including those from Morocco, Yugoslavia, Turkey and India.

Tonight, he and his wife Nancy were to be dinner guests of Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy.

Kissinger arrived in New York late Sunday afternoon and gave a dinner for Communist Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping and Vice Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua.

Wednesday last day to register for school vote

Residents of Sedalia School District No. 200 must be registered in order to vote in the district's May 14 bond levy proposal, a spokesman for the Pettis County clerk's office said Monday.

The deadline for registering is 5 p.m. Wednesday. By law, the election books must be closed four Wednesdays prior to an election. The registration books will be closed only for residents of the school district.

Voters of the district will be asked to increase the levy from $3.62 to $3.99. The levy proposal failed to obtain a simple majority on April 2.

Swearing-in tonight

New council to face question over city economic director

The new Sedalia City Council will convene for the first time at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Municipal Building, and Republicans will waste no time in testing their new 5-4 majority.

First Ward Councilman Don Broadus, a Republican and chairman of the Economic Development Board, said Monday he will ask the new council to give the board permission to once again take applications and interview candidates for the post of economic development director. This will be the second time in six months that the issue will be brought before the council.

Last January the City Council, almost entirely along party lines, voted 5-3 not to hire Charles Elliott, of Trenton, Mo., as an economic development director. Five of the six Democratic councilmen voted in the majority, against two Republicans and one Democrat.

But with the April 2 city elections giving the Republicans two additional City Council seats, the Republicans feel that the time is right to move ahead with plans to hire a replacement for former economic development director Bill Hall, who resigned Aug. 31.

Even though the City Council seats are now evenly divided 4-4 between the two parties, the Republicans actually hold the majority since Republican Mayor Jerry Jones would vote in ties.

Broadus said tonight's request is basically to determine whether the new council actually wants to hire an economic development director. Before the January vote, the council had voted 6-1 to allow the Economic Development Board to conduct interviews and screen applicants for the job.

"We don't want to get stuck again,"

Broadus said, referring to the 5-3 vote.

Also on the agenda at tonight's council meeting are the swearing-in of the newly elected council members and discussion on finding a successor for police judge-elect Ralph Hamlin, who died Saturday.

To be sworn in tonight at Mayor Jones, First Ward Councilman Allen Hawkins, Second Ward Councilman Ira Knox, Third Ward Councilman Bob Wells and Fourth Ward Councilman Robert Eidson.

Eidson and Hawkins, both Republicans, defeated Democratic incumbents Lee Garrison and Jesse Robinson, respectively. Bales and Wells are Democratic incumbents.

Also to be sworn in tonight are City Attorney Robert Liston and City Collector-

Major steel firms sign discrimination settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine major steel firms signed an agreement today with the federal government to pay $31 million in back wages as part of an industry-wide plan for ending racial and sex discrimination in employment.

The voluntary agreement with the Departments of Labor and Justice and the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission is the largest back-pay discrimination settlement to date.

It provides that the nine companies which produce 73 per cent of the nation's steel and the United Steelworkers Union make one-time lump sum payments to some 40,000 black, Spanish-surnamed and women employees who the government contends were relegated to "the less desirable and generally lower paying jobs with the least opportunity for advancement."

Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan called the agreement historic and said "it will insure equal employment opportunity in hiring and promotion in one of our nation's basic industries."

The agreement was entered as a consent decree in U.S. District Court in Birmingham, Ala.

The agreement was sharply criticized by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Herbert Hill, national labor director of the NAACP, said "the major steel corporations and the steel workers union are attempting to buy immunity from further litigation" with support from the federal government.

The most significant aspect of the agreement "is that the affected class of employees was excluded from the negotiations and therefore, the settlement should be rejected by the courts," he said.

"The requirement that all workers receiving back pay sign a waiver relinquishing their right to sue in the future is unconscionable and should be declared illegal," Hill said. "Furthermore, paragraph C of the agreement states that where a worker refuses to sign the waiver and is a plaintiff in a lawsuit, the Department of Justice will intervene in the litigation on behalf of the employer and the steel workers union."

Hill said under the agreement "a black steel worker with 20 years seniority will receive between $400 and $500 instead of the several thousand dollars that represents the difference between the wages he did receive and those which he would have received if there had not been discriminatory seniority provisions in collective bargaining agreements."

Also, he said the agreement "fails to merge or restructure seniority lines of promotion that are based upon race rather than job operations. It merely permits the black worker to bid for jobs in the 'white' seniority line when and if they become vacant."

Mitchell denies all charges against him

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell said today he was "absolutely not guilty" of conspiracy, obstruction of justice or perjury.

"Are you guilty or not guilty?" asked his lawyer, Peter Fleming Jr.

"Absolutely not guilty of any of the charges," said Mitchell.

The former cabinet officer and ex-commerce Secretary Maurice Stans have been on trial in federal court for eight weeks. They are accused of trying to impede a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of financier Robert Vesco in return for his secret $200,000 cash contribution to President Nixon's re-election campaign.

At the end of his direct examination of Mitchell which started last Wednesday before a long holiday weekend recess, Fleming led Mitchell through each of the six counts of perjury. After each one was read, Mitchell said that his testimony to the grand jury had been his best recollection of the facts.

Mitchell also denied that he had told ousted White House Counsel John Dean III that the grand jury which indicted him was "a runaway grand jury" and that the prosecutors who questioned him were "little bastards."

Dean had testified to that effect in an appearance as the prosecutor's witness. Mitchell said that he did not consider the grand jury "runaway" and that he had felt that the prosecutors were "polite and seductive."

The word seductive was stricken by Judge Lee Gagliardi after a prosecutor's objection.

Mitchell also denied Dean's testimony that Mitchell had tried to get him to call then Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst about the end jury's action. Mitchell said he had talked to Kleindienst but only about the propriety of turning over certain of his personal records as attorney general.

Mitchell also denied that he had talked to Donald Hofgren, a volunteer in the Nixon reelection campaign at a dinner in Washington on March 8, 1972. Hofgren, now an investment banker, testified at the trial that he had asked Mitchell if he had seen Vesco that day and that Mitchell had told him to "stay away" from Vesco.

Harry Walch

John Bluhm

Walch, Bluhm are seeking re-election

The two incumbent Republican members of the Pettis County Court Monday filed for re-election.

Seeking second terms are Presiding Judge Harry Walch, 711 West Broadway, and Western District Judge John F. Bluhm Jr., Route 4.

Bluhm, 56, a retired dairy farmer, was first elected to the two-year court position in November, 1972. Walch, 69, defeated B. A. "Bunny" Fischer, a Democrat, in November, 1972, to fill the unexpired term of the late Presiding Judge James Green.

Fischer, along with Eastern District Judge E. L. Birdsong, are seeking the Democratic nomination to the post. No other Republican has filed.

Bluhm will be opposed in the August primary by Jim Robinson, 48, 310 North Park. John Hicks, 55, 119 South Stewart, has been the only Democrat to seek the position.

Walch said Friday that any decision to seek another term would be based on the recommendation of his doctor. "At the doctor's suggestion I'm running," Walch said Monday. "He suggested I file."

Since early this year Walch has been recovering from hepatitis, which he contacted at a St. Louis hospital. Last year he had a malignant tumor removed from his sinus passages. Walch returned to the court Monday.

Bluhm, a veteran of World War II and a life-long resident of Pettis County, cited "continued improvement of roads" as the greatest need of the county at this time.

Walch, a member of Calvary Episcopal Church, said his greatest concerns at this time are implementation of county-wide planning and zoning and implementation of the present county-wide re-evaluation.

Ann Landers

Teenager argues for private diaries

Dear Ann Landers: I didn't like your advice to teenagers who keep diaries. You said, "Never put anything in writing that might cause heartache or humiliation if someone should 'accidentally' find it."

I am 15 years old and I have a diary that means a great deal to me. Parents don't understand what it's like to be able to write whatever you feel like. A diary is a friend. When you've done something wrong, you tell your diary and then you feel better. When you do something good, you can brag about it without being self-conscious. A diary is someone you talk to when you can't talk to anyone else.

There are times when I put my secret hopes and dreams in my diary. They are very personal and private, nobody's business but mine.

Sometimes when I tell my mother things, she smirks or laughs or says I am being childish. My diary listens and understands exactly how I feel.

It's wrong not to be able to be completely honest in a diary for fear someone might see it. I think you should have told mothers to keep their noses out of their daughters' diaries instead of warning girls to be careful what they write. — Tammy

Dear Tammy: Of course you are right, dear. A diary should be private — strictly hands off — and I despise the thought that some mothers are nosy and invade their daughters' privacy, but I tell it like it is.

I've received stacks of letters from mothers who have stuck their noses in their daughters' diaries and have written to say they are "shocked, outraged, stunned, sick at heart, etc." I felt compelled to warn the girls (after I admonished the mothers) so they will be alert to the risk of keeping a diary.

I agree that a diary can be a wonderful friend and a useful outlet for pent-up emotions. A girl SHOULD be able to express herself openly and without fear, but I know the hazards of pouring out one's innermost secrets on paper and the heartache that can follow if those words are read by a third party. I want to protect you girls as best I can and that's why I warned against putting such information in writing.

Dear Ann Landers: I am the mother of a homosexual. At first it was very difficult for me to accept the fact. But now I am over my feelings of horror and revulsion and I know my son needs my love and understanding.

People frequently ask me why he isn't married. When I say he just hasn't found the right girl, they offer to fix him up a date with some nice young woman. When I discourage them they keep pressing and I become self-conscious.

Sometimes I have the feeling people KNOW and are asking just to see what I will say. Do you think the day will ever come when a mother will be able to look a person in the eye and say, "My son is a homosexual and that's why he is not married?" Until that day comes, what can a mother say? — Need Some Counsel

Dear Need: I cannot see that your son's sexual preference is anybody's business. Nor do I believe that you should explain his preference or attempt to defend him in any way. It's actually nobody's business. Many unmarried men are not homosexuals and it may be that you are overreacting. Handle the questions about your son casually and change the subject.

Study gives warning on food stamps

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional staff study says rising food prices over the next two years may result in making one out of every four Americans eligible for government food stamps.

This would push program costs from the current $3 billion annually to a possible $10 billion, according to a staff study prepared for the Senate-House Economic Committee.

The study was released Sunday by Rep. Martha W. Griffiths, D-Mich., chairman of the joint committee's fiscal policy subcommittee.

"Unless food prices stabilize before July 4, 1976, an estimated 60 million Americans — more than one in four — might be eligible for food stamps at some time during the nation's bicentennial year," Mrs. Griffiths said in a statement.

The food stamp program, which in recent years has been transformed into the country's only universal income supplement, in January 1974 served 13 million persons, one in every 16 Americans.

However, the study noted, "its costs and caseload are expected to continue to rise dramatically, since the food stamp allotment and income eligibility levels will be adjusted upward semiannually for food price increases."

Food stamp costs to recipients are adjusted down according to income. Currently, a male-headed family of four without any income can receive an allotment of $142 a month in food stamps for free.

Man killed, wife injured by two men

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Bill R. "Skip" Walker, 28, was shot and killed and his wife, Betty Jo, was beaten and stabbed in the neck at their home Saturday.

Mrs. Walker said two men accosted her at home when she returned from the Walkers' "Soul Food" restaurant about noon. She said the two men told her they "had a $5,000 contract to kill a man named Billy and a woman named Betty Jo."

She said the men confronted Walker when he arrived home. He struggled with one of them and the other man, Mrs. Walker said, shot her husband in the back.

Mrs. Walker told police she did not know the men or what the motive was for the killing. However, she said her husband made enemies because he resisted efforts by other persons to use his business to sell drugs and operate prostitution and gambling activities.

"It was the hustlers," she said, "the guys who don't like to work."

Both natives of Louisiana, Mrs. Walker and her husband moved to Kansas City, Kan., in 1970 following his discharge from the Army. She said her husband had promised to close the restaurant this year and return to the Shreveport, La., area.

Victim of purse snatcher dies from injuries

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Mrs. Ethel D. Rimmer, 77, died Sunday of injuries suffered a week ago when a purse thief pushed her to the ground and she struck her head.

Police have listed her death as the 37th homicide of the year in Kansas City.

Officers said Mrs. Rimmer was walking with a woman companion last Monday afternoon, April 8, when two youths approached them from behind. They said one of the youths grabbed Mrs. Rimmer's purse and when she resisted he shoved her to the ground.

The youths fled without Mrs. Rimmer's purse and without bothering the other woman.

A native of Rochepot, Mo., Mrs. Rimmer had lived in Kansas City about 32 years.

There are 1,600 rockhounds clubs nationwide, and their membership represents only about 7 per cent of the people who take part in the hobby.

Jerusalem crowded by pilgrims Sunday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Roman Catholics, Protestants and Orthodox Christians all celebrated Easter in Jerusalem on Sunday.

In Rome, Pope Paul VI urged mankind to follow "the law of duty, of service, of sorrow, of love, of sacrifice — the wise and true interpretation of human life."

Pierce fighting less than 100 miles away went almost unnoticed as pilgrims crowded into Jerusalem's Church of the Holy Sepulchre, believed to mark the site of the burial and resurrection of Jesus.

All Christians celebrated Easter on the same day because of a leap year in the Orthodox calendar. The Western rites held their services first; then the Orthodox worshippers took over.

Security precautions were increased in Jerusalem because of the Arab guerrilla raid in northern Israel last week. But there was no trouble. The Ministry of Tourism said there were more than 45,000 pilgrims — including Jews for Passover — in the city. The crowd equaled that of last year.

Cleaning of statue poses problem

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns pants suits, regular suits and jumpers that come with blouses that never seem to be a perfect fit. Usually they are too small. Why not have the matching blouse available, separately, so one could purchase the proper size. — D.L.D.

DEAR POLLY — Connie will find that cleaning old brass (even when pitted or covered with paint) becomes simple, quick and inexpensive if she uses ammonia and 0000 steel wool. Sudsy ammonia will work and so will a soapy steel wool pad if that is all she has on hand. For the worst jobs strong ammonia (bought at the drug store) is even faster than household ammonia.

I have never damaged any brass with these materials BUT the human lungs and stomach could be. Ammonia is POISON and should be used with all the doors and windows open. If Connie's husband is handy it would be best for him to take the chandelier down and work on it outdoors. Otherwise this job should be done in spurts and stops and starts and dashes to an open window or door for fresh air. Rubber gloves help, too. — BUNELLE.

DEAR GIRLS — Several readers wrote that they used ammonia for the job. I tried it on both a brass-plated item and solid brass one. I was not happy with the results on the brass plate so do test a corner first. The old black tarnish poured off the solid brass scone and it came clean but looked dull. I like a sheen on brass so followed the above treatment with a quick going over with a powdered brass cleaner and the glow returned.

Before working on a lighting fixture (if it has to remain hanging) be sure to turn the current off at the fuse box. Also cover anything under the fixture completely. Removing it will certainly save the arms. Be sure all old lacquer is off before starting to clean. Denatured alcohol (poison) or laundry area. Often a box of soap, sitting on the floor, is ruined by water. I now pour my soap into a no-longer used diaper bucket with a lid so even splashed water does not get into the soap and harden it. — PAT.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — Will someone please tell me how to clean a crushed marble statue? I was told that washing would cause it to crumble. Is this true? After cleaning can some sort of protective glaze be put on it so dust and dirt will not collect so badly? If so, what is the procedure? — MRS. J.M.D.

Psychiatrist says housewife lacks focus

NEW YORK (AP) — Housewives have good reason for going to pieces, says a psychiatrist who considers the old expression appropriate for today.

"Going to pieces is the old expression for a breakdown," said Dr. Robert Seidenberg. "But it's a better description of the lives of housewives today. They must meet their husbands' needs, their children's needs and handle their housework. Their lives are fragmented and they spend more time with machines than with their families."

Dr. Seidenberg says housewives are the new servant class in America.

"The husband's life has a central core: his job. But each time he is transferred to a new community, a wife must make new friends, extend herself to establish a new identity. Even when moves don't occur that often, a housewife's life is in a bunch of pieces," he said.

Seidenberg, author of "Corporate Wives, Corporate Casualties," explores the issue in his book. He practices in Syracuse, N.Y., where around 100 of the nation's largest corporations have branches, and where he encountered many "corporate wives" in practice.

"Professionally, I see wives and children, rarely husbands. The traumatic aspects of consciously fragmenting a woman's life, shedding her credentials for each move, are emotionally destructive. Women may take tranquilizers, begin to drink or just feel depressed."

"Two things happen to children. Moving can bring families closer together but they also may overload the system. Mothers expect more of children in the way of gratification. This even happens in countries like Japan," Seidenberg said.

He added that his book came partly from his own dissatisfaction with theories in his discipline. Then he began to get letters of reaction from women across the country who said he described their problems exactly.

"Women have little choice about moving. If they don't, they may be guilty of desertion; the law supports the husband. In some states, a woman who is not living in her husband's domicile can lose her right to vote or to hold office," he added.

"The law is not alone. Macho, which individual men have, corporations also have," Seidenberg said.

"I once asked an executive with a giant corporation what happened if he had a woman executive to promote and transfer. He said he first talked to her husband to find out if it would be okay."

Seidenberg has found little direct investigation of wives by companies. He says that instead, such investigation is turned over to an executive search organization, or is medicalized so that it appears to involve health care and benefits.

"Corporate America must answer the question of how much of a man they buy when they pay his salary. A line has to be drawn. A corporation buys a man's skills and a certain degree of loyalty, but it cannot and should not expect to own the whole family," he said.

The psychiatrist believes that women in the future will be persons in their own right, working at least part time. This, he said, would be the real solution to the problem of the corporate wife.

Seidenberg, a classically trained psychoanalyst, says he is a Freudian who "is constantly adapting and making adjustments in the traditional view of analysis."

He is a member of the National Organization for Women and says he is able to be active because his wife, an attorney, is active in the women's movement as well.

"I think issues have their time; you can't rush history. Look at the change in the visibility of women in the past few years: who would have predicted it? I think there will now be more opportunity for women to achieve at home and in the community as well as in the world of professionals," Seidenberg said.

Expert calls bridge 'wholesome'

Life master

Peggy Hanna, a life master at bridge, the highest rank a player can earn, says she can't name a single friend who doesn't play bridge and she thinks nothing of driving 50 miles on a wintry night to keep a bridge appointment.

By MARGE FREANEY

News-Times Writer
DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — To Peggy Hanna, bridge is a "wonderful, wholesome sport."

But she says it has ruined marriages, caused ulcers and left couples childless, and "there are some married couples who should never play — not together, anyway."

Mrs. Hanna is a new life master, the highest rank a bridge player can get. Although she and her husband Richard, another life master, don't view the bridge table as a marital battleground, they tell some stories that might prompt some card players to stick to solitaire.

"I've seen husbands scream at their wives; some people can be very rude and insulting. At tournaments, the room sometimes sounds like a disturbed ward," said Mrs. Hanna, who notes that bridge etiquette requires partners to be silent during bidding.

"I've never been to a national tournament where they didn't have to call the doctor," she said. "The tension is incredible."

Life master is to bridge what the Hall of Fame is to baseball. Players must accumulate 300 master points, 50 of them from regional and national contests.

Mrs. Hanna began playing less than 10 years ago when a Welcome Wagon Club in South Bend, Ind., offered lessons in "social bridge," a less demanding game than duplicate bridge.

"To tell the truth, I don't even remember how to play party bridge any more," said Mrs. Hanna. "Really, it's just an excuse for women to get together and have fun. You can't socialize when you're playing duplicate."

She can't name a single friend who doesn't play bridge and she thinks nothing of driving 50 miles on a wintry night to keep a bridge appointment. Most vacations are combined with bridge, and the Hannas spent their honeymoon playing bridge with hundreds of others in a 10-day national tournament in Pennsylvania.

When she moved to Danbury, Mrs. Hanna studied three or four nights a week, joined two bridge clubs and subscribed to four monthly bridge magazines.

Her bookcases are full of trophies and books on bridge.

"We go to three or four national tournaments a year, enter most of the regionals and sectionals, and we play three or four nights a week with friends or at our local bridge club," Mrs. Hanna said.

Tournaments consist of three sessions of bridge a day with as many as 1,000 high caliber players competing in tense games. Beside the $7 fee for each session, players must pay for hotel, meals and drinks.

"I've heard people say you spend about $10,000 by the time you get life master," Mrs. Hanna said. But prizes are not large for winning tournaments, usually merchandise or trading stamps.

"Well, you certainly don't play for the money," she laughed. "I play because I love it. It's intellectually stimulating and a lot of fun. You've got to be very competitive, and you have to be on your toes."

Until their seven children are grown, the Hannas will continue their present bridge schedule. But they dream of the 30-day bridge cruises traveling the Caribbean, and they are considering moving to New York when the family leaves home.

"In New York," she said, "You can find a bridge game every night of the week."

Be sure not to get fingerprints on the fixture after the alcohol application or the lacquer will not stick. This will prevent a big cleaning job in the future but when the lacquer eventually dulls remove it and apply a fresh coat. This is going to be work any way you do it and, of course, the easiest and safest way would be to take the fixture to a metal refinisher. — POLLY.

'Promising leads' in traffic death reported

(Democrat-Capital Service)

WARSAW — Benton County authorities said Monday they are conducting an intensive investigation into the weekend traffic death of John E. Bedgood, 28, Belton.

Bedgood died early Saturday morning near Hastings, near Routes V and M, when he was run over by a pickup truck. Bedgood was among six couples and two children of the "Missing Links" motorcycle club of Belton who were camping out near Hastings, about two miles east of where Bedgood was killed.

Bedgood was killed on a deserted county road while away from camp to gather firewood with another cyclist and two men inside the pickup truck.

Late Friday night, sheriff's officers said, the two men drove the 1964 Chevrolet pickup truck into the group's camp to visit. After visiting for about two hours, said Benton County Deputy Sheriff Al Doty, the two men reportedly asked Bedgood and a friend to help gather firewood.

Officials said Bedgood was standing in front of the truck lighting a cigarette when the driver of the vehicle revved the engine and ran over him. The body was dragged 93 feet before the pickup sped away, leaving almost 40 feet of tire tracks.

Doty said authorities have not established a motive for the homicide.

Doty also said Monday that "we do have some very promising leads. With a little luck, we'll have some warrants out very shortly." The deputy declined to elaborate on the leads.

Authorities reported that they received only vague descriptions of the two men in the pickup truck and three differing opinions of the color of the truck. The truck was believed to be carrying Kansas license plates.

Income tax filing deadline is at midnight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Today is April 15, the deadline for filing your 1973 income tax return, unless you live in Maine, Massachusetts or North Carolina.

In those states you have until Tuesday because today is a legal holiday — Patriot's day in Maine and Massachusetts and Easter Monday in North Carolina.

The Internal Revenue Service estimated that it will receive more than 80 million returns this year, up considerably from 425,000 returns filed in 1913, the year that the Payne-Aldrich act created the income tax.

And of these 80 million, officials say nearly half are sent in during the last two weeks, with many tax-payers hurrying to the post office to get them postmarked before the midnight deadline.

Officials of the IRS declined to estimate the number of persons who may be trying to cheat on their taxes, although one spokesman said such attempts seem to be running about the same level as in the past.

Last year the IRS prosecuted 1,342 persons for income tax evasion.

Sedalia man is involved in shooting

A Sedalia man, Robert Anthony Marshall, 18, 625 North Moniteau, was involved in a shooting incident in Columbia Friday in which two youths were injured when a pistol displayed by Marshall discharged, according to Columbia police.

Detective Ron Cross told The Democrat-Capital that Marshall was apparently playing with the gun, believed to be a .38-caliber, and, not thinking the weapon was loaded, pointed it at a 15-year-old boy. Cross said the pistol discharged, striking the youth in the cheek and exited from the back of his neck, striking a 16-year-old girl who was sitting beside him, in the left arm.

Cross said that both victims were in good condition and the shooting had been listed as "accidental," although police will continue to investigate the matter.

Cross said that originally the two that had been shot told police that someone in a ski mask stuck his arm through the door and fired a gun at them, but they later admitted that Marshall had done the shooting. The two told police they made up the first story because they were afraid that "someone might get into trouble."

Marshall was involved in a shooting incident in Sedalia Jan. 13 of this year in which he was shot at least three times, allegedly by Wilson Lee Curd III, 317 East Johnson. That trial is still pending in Pettis County Circuit Court.

Marshall is on two years' probation in connection with the Feb. 28, 1972, stabbing death of a Lexington man at the Anthony Buckner Apartments on West Saline.

Doty said that the "Missing Links" were a "fine group of people who had never created a problem here before."

"They were good people," Doty said, "with good jobs ... who would just do this on weekends." The members, he said, weren't "Hell's Angels-types."

Bedgood's wife of "only four days" was among the other members of the camp group, Doty said.

Morgan County jail escapees captured here

Sedalia police officers apprehended three escapees from the Morgan County Jail Sunday within minutes after being notified of the escape.

Kenneth Wayne Calton, 17, and his brother Carol Gene Calton, 18, both of Versailles, were arrested about 11:30 a.m. at the Stucco Inn, 109 South Grand. The third man, Marvin Allen Fox, Ivy Bend, was arrested a short time later in the 100 block of North Grand.

According to Police Chief William Miller, the police department was notified of the escape and advised that the escapees might be driving a bright yellow Ford.

The fact that Fox was formerly of Sedalia prompted Officer Ron Hoskins to check out a few of the places where he believed Fox had frequented in the past. While driving around, Hoskins noticed a yellow Ford parked behind the Stucco Inn.

Miller said a man was standing by the yellow car as Hoskins approached and, when asked by Hoskins to give his name, the man replied with only his first name. After talking with the man briefly, Hoskins placed him under arrest for investigation of being wanted in connection with the escape. Hoskins then handcuffed the man to the car and went inside the Stucco Inn where he arrested a second man. The two men proved to be the Calton brothers.

As Hoskins was taking the two brothers to the police station, Officer Levoy City advised the department that he believed he had spotted Fox walking in the 100 block of North Grand. City stopped the man and placed him under arrest when he found it was Fox.

All three of the escapees were held in city jail until 1:15 p.m. Sunday, when they were turned over to Morgan County Sheriff's officials.

Morgan County Sheriff L. M. Earnest told The Democrat-Capital that the younger Calton, a ward of the juvenile court and a trustee at the jail, released his brother and Fox between 2:30 and 3 a.m. Sunday. Earnest said the three men walked out the front door of the jail and remained on foot for about three-quarters of a mile and then apparently stole the 1964 yellow Ford from Roy's Auto Sales, Versailles.

The three then drove toward Sedalia and, about 12 miles south of the city on Route C, reportedly stole a set of license plates from a car belonging to Dick L. Klein, Sedalia, who was in church, and put them on the Ford.

Earnest said that escape and auto theft charges would probably be filed on all three escapees, although the charges against the younger Calton will be handled by the Morgan County juvenile court.

The elder Calton and Fox were originally being held in jail for passing bogus checks.

Treasurer Mrs. Opal Hugelman, both Democratic incumbents.

Hamlin, a Republican, had defeated Democratic incumbent Lawrence Englund. A special election will be called to fill the police judge vacancy, city officials indicated.

Until a permanent replacement is selected, a temporary police court judge will have to be named. Mayor Jones said Monday that he, and not the council will appoint a temporary replacement for Hamlin. Jones said he has made no decision.

In other action tonight, committees for the new legislative term will be named, Jones said.

The council also is scheduled to vote on another City Planning and Zoning Commission recommendation to rezone property on the south side of West Ninth, between Limit and Warren, from single family residential to C-1 (local business district).

The commission Wednesday night voted 4-2 on the recommendation. The City Council had rejected on Jan. 21 the commission's initial recommendation to rezone the property after a dispute arose concerning the validity of a petition objecting to the rezoning. At that time City Counselor Bob Fritz said the petition was not valid because it was not notarized.

Three additional lots were added to the rezoning request this time. The property is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Wilmount Coulter and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Thomas.

Construction talks' progress reported

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Negotiations are continuing between 10 construction unions and the Builders Association and Heavy Constructors Association.

W. W. Hutton, managing director of the Builders Association, said there had been some progress made in informal talks over the weekend.

"I imagine we will talk about pay today, but I don't know for certain," said Hutton. "We still have several issues outstanding."

Karl Rogers, president of Teamsters Local 541 and spokesmen for 10 of 12 unions involved in the negotiations, said "people keep saying we are going to strike... I never said it."

Rogers said there was no certainty the group would call a strike even if a few contract issues remained outstanding.

The 10 unions represent about 11,500 construction workers and the two management groups are made up of about 900 firms covering all unionized construction work in the metropolitan area.

South Pacific plane crash report denied

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — The flight controller at New Caledonia's international airport today denied a report that a jet airliner had crashed into the sea off the French island in the South Pacific.

Major airlines servicing New Caledonia said none of their planes was missing. A full alert was ordered but was called off after all aircraft in the vicinity were accounted for.

Pierre Dubosq, the flight controller at Contouta Airport in New Caledonia, said a small airport 50 miles from Contouta reported receiving a distress signal from a small plane.

He said the pilot reported engine failure was causing him to lose altitude and he might have to land in the sea.

The nationality, type of plane and the pilot's name were not known.

Agence France Presse, the French news agency, reported in Paris that an airliner had made a crash landing north of New Caledonia, and 160 survivors had taken to liferafts.

The French news agency said the plane was a Pan American airliner.

But Pan American spokesmen in Paris and New York denied the report. UTA, the French airline that operates in the South Pacific, and the Australian airline Qantas said none of their planes was missing either.

The initial report said the plane crashed landed near the Belef Islands, a series of small islands just north of the French Territory of New Caledonia and about 900 miles east of Australia.

Goldsmith created the ultimate push-button

Imperial Easter gift

One of the most lavish Easter gifts ever devised, this jeweled rock crystal egg was presented by Czar Nicholas II to the czarina, Alexandra Feodorovna, in 1896. Fashioned by the master goldsmith Peter Paul Faberge, the egg is topped with an emerald push button which causes the twelve miniatures inside to revolve. It is one of five imperial eggs in the Faberge collection of the Virginia Museum in Richmond, Va. (AP)

By DONALD SANDERS
Associated Press Writer
RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Three-quarters of a century ago, given the right circumstances, you could have presented your wife with an elaborately decorated Easter egg containing a surprise which she could see by pressing a huge emerald button.

But the circumstances had to be right. You had to be "emperor and autocrat of all the Russias" and thus dispenser of the incalculable wealth which the imperial czars enjoyed.

Blessed with that title and that wealth, you would have received a flawlessly crafted egg from the House of Peter Carl Faberge, perhaps the most celebrated goldsmith since Benvenuto Cellini.

Faberge's artistic empire collapsed 57 years ago along with the reign of Russia's Czars. But many of his eggs survive. Five of them are on display at the Virginia Museum here.

It is the largest and finest public collection of Faberge works in the world, containing 328 pieces in all. Besides the priceless Easter eggs from the imperial court, it includes dozens of small ones, pendants, picture frames, flowers, icons, jewelry and other objects.

The collection was a bequest from the wife of a General Motors vice president. She apparently started it on a whim. Mrs. Lillian Thomas Pratt had not been a serious art collector, but in the '30's she purchased most of the works from the Hammer Gallery in New York on the advice of Victor Hammer. He is the brother of Dr. Armand Hammer, president of Occidental Petroleum Corp. Dr. Hammer has maintained close ties with Moscow for years as an art collector and a petroleum executive.

The five imperial eggs which Mrs. Pratt willed to the Virginia Museum before her death in 1947 are part of Faberge's total production of 56 to 58.

Forty-five are still known to exist. Some are in American collections, and the Hermitage museum in Leningrad has a number. But those are not on public view.

The eggs are the ultimate in the jeweler's art, with elaborate wrought gold, enamels, miniature portraits, diamonds

Jeweled treasure

is the largest and finest in the world, comprising 328 pieces in all. The collection was willed to the museum by the late Lillian Thomas Pratt, and came into the museum's possession in 1947.

and — since diamonds were commonplace in czarist St. Petersburg — other gems such as lapis lazuli, emeralds, sapphires, rock crystals and others.

Several also contain intricate gadgetry. It was the custom at Easter to exchange Easter eggs, telling the recipient, "Christ is risen." And at the Russian court, the egg often contained a surprise.

The earliest imperial one in the Virginia collection was presented to Czarina Alexandra Feodorovna by her husband, Nicholas II, in 1896.

Three years in the making, it is a rock crystal egg 10 inches high and four in diameter; the two halves held together with a vertical band set with scores of small diamonds. Inside are a dozen miniature paintings.

The paintings revolve around the gold axis of the egg. At the apex is a 27-karat emerald the size of a robin's egg. When depressed, it engages a hook at the top of the pictures; when the emerald is twisted, the miniature pictures revolve on the axis and a new one is disclosed to view.

It may well be the world's most expensive push button.

Another egg presented to the czarina in 1912 contains an early three-dimensional portrait of her son, the Czarvitch Alexis, whose hemophilia figured in pre-revolutionary Russian politics.

Dowager Empress Marie Feodorovna was recipient of the most recently-made egg in the Virginia collection. Three inches high, it is of white enamel on a chased silver ground and bears opposing red enamel crosses in recognition of her presidency of the Red Cross.

A museum spokesman says the collection is "priceless in value."

The museum was able to display only about 30 pieces of the collection at a time at first. A later director, Leslie Cheek, Jr., designed the present display above the museum's main entrance.

Adjoining the gallery is a smaller one with a few of the Faberge pieces and some items of related Russian art, and a six-seat orientation theater where visitors may see slides and hear a short talk about Faberge, who fled Russia at the time of the 1917 revolution and died in Switzerland in 1920.

Writer-lawyer juggles careers

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — There are times when attorney Louis Auchincloss will sit at the desk in his Wall Street law firm office and write a short story or work on a novel. And there are times when writer Auchincloss will be sitting in the privacy of his New York home practicing law.

Auchincloss is one of those rare people who has managed to combine two distinct careers successfully, although he admits the combining was a "long, tortured procedure that took a great deal of stress and misery" to bring off.

The 56-year-old Auchincloss, wearing a conservatively-cut dark suit enlivened by green suspenders, leaned back from his desk and said, "My time is pretty much my own. If I want to write in the office and practice law at home I can. Of course, there are certain things which I have to produce for the firm (in which he is a partner handling mostly estates and trusts) and I do them. But I find that if my writing goes well my law practice seems to go well also."

Auchincloss, who has written 24 books, the latest a novel called "The Partners," says, "None of my family ever wrote, but I always wanted to be a writer. I didn't get any encouragement, so I gave up the idea and went to law school."

"You see, I grew up with the idea that writing was not a man's game. The law, business, medicine were the proper fields for men in the bourgeois New York world I grew up in. But not writing."

After four years of World War II naval service, Auchincloss practiced law until 1952, when he dropped out to try his hand at being a fulltime writer.

"I didn't have much money," he says with a smile, "and if my father hadn't helped me out I don't think I could have swung it from the writing alone."

He published a couple of novels during this period but decided to return to law practice in 1954 because "I found I was writing less as a fulltime writer than I had been as a lawyer-writer."

"I wanted to see if I could make it as a writer and found that at the time there was no economic future in it. All of my contemporaries were making money, and I was out of step. So I went back to the law and things all worked out very fortunately."

Auchincloss, a relaxed man who speaks precisely, says many of his books — each of which takes him about a year to write — "get a lot of inspiration from my work, although not all of them deal with the law."

One that does is "The Partners," which deals with a New York law firm and especially with one of its senior partners, Beekman (Beeky) Ehninger. "The general theme of the book," says Auchincloss, "is the degeneration of the moral values of the past. That is why

I deliberately made Beeky a small man, to emphasize this degeneration."

Following completion of the book, Auchincloss wrote a television script — divided into six one-hour segments, based on Edith Wharton's novel "House of Mirth."

"I love that novel," he says, adding, "I feel very close to her because the worlds we write about have a definite similarity. I have all her works in first editions and ordinarily they'd be on that empty shelf over there but they're not because they're remodeling the place, as you can see."

With the TV script done, Auchincloss says, "I've no ideas for any writing now. It's a completely empty period, but I'm quite sure the well will fill up again."

Big business and personal privacy can co-exist

WASHINGTON — In November 1969 I wrote a rather critical column about Retail Credit Company, the huge Atlanta-based firm which specializes in investigating private citizens for insurance companies, potential employers or for banks and retailers wondering whether to grant credit.

Rowan

Criticism of Retail Credit Co. has now reached the point where the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) will hold hearings later this month — hearings that could lead to legislation restricting severely the operations of credit reporting companies.

These FTC hearings are of considerable importance if we ever are to stop the erosion of personal privacy in America.

For Retail Credit writes up some 35 million Americans every year — Americans who, in most instances, are not seeking credit any place.

I pointed out in the 1969 article that many an American is denied life insurance, or a job, because some faceless informant has told a Retail Credit investigator that "he drinks a lot," or "she's a dirty housekeeper," or "he dates people of the opposite race."

I pointed out also that Retail Credit would use a code to tell insurance companies the racial makeup of an applicant's neighborhood. "AS," for example, meant that the applicant lived in an Anglo-Saxon community.

W. Lee Burge, president of Retail Credit, wrote me to say that his company had stopped including information about race and that "even in the past when race was reported, it was not designed to aid discrimination, it was an identification factor that aided objective business decision making."

More than a few grains of salt are needed to make that disclaimer swallowable.

Whatever the case, the FTC has now leveled stronger charges at Retail Credit. It claims the company puts such a heavy daily workload on employees that they must falsify information to meet quotas. The FTC also claims that Retail Credit requires its investigators to file a certain percentage of derogatory reports because it is the digging up of dirt which impresses Retail Credit's customers.

Burge calls such charges "outrageous" and will challenge the FTC to offer specific proof.

At the center of dispute are two questions:

1. How free should a giant investigative company be to snoop into the private finances, the lifestyles, the sexual and drinking practices of Americans?

2. Should people on whom Retail Credit or some other firm has filed derogatory information be entitled to know what was reported, where investigators got their information, and then have a chance to rebut it?

I pointed out in 1969 that Retail Credit had admitted it exchanged information with the FBI. What right does a business firm have to the gossip, innuendo and other raw data that is in FBI files? And why should credit investigators pump the gossip and rumors they pick up into the files of the FBI?

Critics argue that Retail Credit hurts a lot of people. Burge admits that as many as 175,000 people a year may be victimized by false reports. But he argues that Retail Credit helps millions. "In our highly mobile society," he wrote me, "it is essential that business be able to establish the qualifications and the validity of business applicants. Our company has served this need and makes it possible for the vast majority of consumers (and by this I mean from 90 to 99 per cent) to get the services or products they want."

Several congressmen are demanding that people written up by credit reporting firms must have the right "to face their accusers." Burge argues that Retail Credit's sources would "dry up" if they could not remain anonymous.

Yet, where people cannot respond to slurs on their character or integrity, they become easy victims of the jealous or just plain unscrupulous neighbor or business associate who can remain unnamed.

Burge seems to feel that business cannot function properly, and to the benefit of consumers, unless Americans yield much of their privacy. If Retail Credit loses its case before the FTC, we may get a chance to find out whether we can have insurance policies, charge cards and privacy, too.

F. D. KNEIBERT
EditorUN is peering into an alarming future

Peering into the future used to be a generally optimistic pastime, filled with visions of modernistic cities, advanced forms of transportation, and the assurance of continued progress through science, technology and medicine.

In the space of a very few years, this has radically changed. What man sees now when he looks into the future is more apt to appall him.

At the United Nations in New York, a special session is in progress, called by nations of the Third World, to consider the future, say up to about the year 2000. The scenario is not a comforting one.

Perhaps the most serious crisis is one that is already evident in many parts of the world — famine. Major portions of Northern Africa remain in the grip of a three-year drought that has caused widespread starvation. Portions of Asia, especially India, face the same gloomy prospect.

World food reserves are at an all-time low. This applies to the United States as well, which will make it impossible for America to mount the kinds of large-scale food rescue efforts of the past.

The UN session is also discussing other threats to world order, such as the energy shortage, diminishing raw materials, economic instability and unchecked population growth.

Since shortages of life's essentials lead directly to political chaos and set the stage for wars, it is proper that the United Nations should address itself to such problems. But coping with them will require a degree of cooperation between nations of the world, including those of different political ideologies, that the UN has so far failed to achieve.

It is hoped that this will come, as the dimensions of the problems facing planet earth become increasingly apparent.

"OKAY, BUDDY, NOW I'M GONNA ASK A FEW PROBING QUESTIONS."

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The Watergate prosecutors are pushing their investigation of former Treasury Secretary John Connally right into the White House oval office. They have asked the White House for tapes of conversations between President Nixon and Connally on milk matters.

In secret statements to the Watergate prosecutors, dairy lobbyist Jake Jacobsen has said he delivered $10,000 to Connally at the Treasury Department. Jacobsen alleged that Connally pocketed the money and returned it only after the dairy lobby came under investigation.

The forceful Connally, once a power in the Nixon Cabinet and still a presidential contender, told us in a lengthy telephone conversation from Texas that he had been offered the $10,000 but had rejected it. "I have told the prosecutors the truth," he declared emphatically.

The prosecutors, meanwhile, are eager to learn what the President and Connally said to one another about the dairy industry's push for higher price supports in 1971 and 1972.

Both men attended a White House meeting on March 23, 1972, to discuss the dairy leaders' requests. The White House account of the meeting acknowledges that Connally said the dairy industry "had political funds which would be distributed among House and Senate candidates in the coming election."

The dairymen also promised financial support for the President's own re-election campaign.

The following day, the White House ordered a subsidy increase worth $500 million a year to the dairy industry.

The prosecutors are particularly interested in Nixon-Connally conversations during the 30-day period preceding the White House meeting. Sources close to the case tell us that one take is thought to be "extremely sensitive." This reportedly gives the President's responses, as picked up by the White House recording system, during a crucial telephone talk with Connally.

Merry-go-round

Our sources say the prosecutors are also interested in the President's conversations with former Attorney General John Mitchell on the milk case. This may indicate that the prosecutors are investigating Nixon's own role in the milk scandal.

Jacobsen has told the prosecutors, meanwhile, that Connally returned the $10,000 not once but twice. The former Treasury secretary allegedly became worried that the first batch of bills could be traced.

Jacobsen and Connally also got together on a cover story. Jacobsen promised to say he had never delivered the $10,000 to Connally but had kept it in a safe deposit box. Jacobsen has now been indicted for perjury for telling this story under oath to a grand jury.

His belated confession has been checked out by FBI agents who have confirmed from available records and witnesses many of the details, according to FBI sources.

OPPRESSED MINERS: Two giant mining companies have been allowed to deduct from their U.S. taxes the money they pay to South Africa from the fabulous Tsumeb mines, which American churchmen charge are worked by oppressed blacks. The churchmen tell us the working conditions are "inhuman."

The mines are located in the vast southwest African region of Namibia, which was ordered freed in 1966 by the United Nations. Both the World Court and the U.S. Government backed up the ruling. Yet South Africa refused to leave, holding Namibia by force.

One reason was that the South African government is raking in millions from the Tsumeb mines. The money is paid primarily by two American mining companies, Newmont and America Metal Climax. Although South Africa is holding Namibia illegally, the U.S. Government has permitted the companies to write off the taxes they pay to South Africa.

In 1971, a desperate wildcat strike of 13,000 blacks brought some reforms. Terms in the mines were cut from two years to six months and mattresses were provided to cover the workers' two-decker cement bunks. But the men were still barred from living with their families.

Blacks, no matter how well qualified, are never put over a white worker. The whites average $685 a month, the blacks $65. By contrast, Newmont's president, Plato Malozemoff, collects well over $20,000 a month, plus a $120,000-a-year retirement plan.

So outraged are some Newmont stockholders that they are waging a proxy fight and a showdown is almost certain at the annual meeting May 22. The revolt is led by the United Church of Christ, which owns $2 million in Newmont stock.

Arms lead,
not pact
Soviet aimBy RAY CROMLEY
NEA News Analyst

WASHINGTON — Russia's Leonid Brezhnev has Dr. Henry Kissinger over a barrel — almost.

The momentum of Soviet military research and the breadth of Soviet intercontinental missile programs are so great Brezhnev is in no mood to make any deal which effectively hampers this Russian drive toward superiority. Or so it would appear from cables reaching the State and Defense Departments in recent days.

Cromley

The United States is well ahead technically as of now — and likely to stay in the lead for the next five to seven years. American negotiators have been attempting to convince the Russians that Moscow's stubborn insistence on pushing ahead militarily with no meaningful restrictions may lead to an arms race the United States would most certainly win. The result, they've been telling Brezhnev, would be as in the moon race or in economic growth. In the long stretch, the superiority of our research and development would overwhelm the best the USSR would be able to offer.

The Russians, however, have been buoyed by their recent breakthroughs which have come more rapidly than American technical men anticipated and by the effectiveness of their newest conventional weapons in the Arab-Israeli war. So they have not been buying this argument.

They know, and they know that U.S. analysts know, that Soviet military technological progress now threatens U.S. superiority. They could see for themselves, as American military research men admit in private talks, that the improvement in Soviet conventional weapons has been astounding — particularly as compared with the lack of effectiveness of Russian weaponry displayed in the Vietnam war.

The Soviet Union unquestionably has some very serious military weaknesses at the moment — in computers, electronics and communications. But Soviet negotiators apparently believe they will solve these problems through unclassified commercial arrangements with American companies. The Soviet Union may not, in the end, be able to buy this know-how as easily as the Russians seem to believe. But the evidence today is that what they require will be supplied them, either directly by the United States or indirectly through the Europeans.

It also appears abundantly clear to the Russians that the United States is not, and has not for some time, been prepared to spend the extra hundreds of millions in research and development which would guarantee continued American superiority.

The Russians know the United States came from behind to win the moon race because we were willing to put $3 to $5 billion a year into this very limited drive. They know the United States spends many billions on research which leads directly and indirectly to industrial and economic advances. They are also aware of the relatively limited size of the American defense research budget and the relatively modest effort in this area over the past four to five years, a time when the Soviet Union has been expanding such research with vigor.

The Russians also know that Congress would be most reluctant to finance an arms race with the Soviet Union.

All and all the evidence of the official cables is that the Russian negotiators are being very tough indeed, and of late have not been inclined to the compromise that is the essence of any reasonable arms agreement.

State advisory council to direct rural development pilot project

(Democrat-Capital Service)

COLUMBIA — One of eight predominantly rural multi-county areas in Missouri will soon participate in a pilot program in rural development, according to Elmer R. Kiehl, dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Kiehl is head of a state advisory council participating in launching a rural development research and education program, partly funded by Title V of the Rural Development Act of 1972.

The five goals of the Act are to:

- 1) Increase job and income opportunities;
- 2) Improve quality of life;
- 3) Improve essential community services and facilities;
- 4) Improve housing;
- 5) And enhance those social processes necessary to achieve the first four goals.

"This is a three-year demonstration program designed to accelerate the processes and results of rural development in one designated regional planning commission district in the state by working with its regional rural development committee," Kiehl said.

At the January meeting of the State Rural Development Advisory Council, Daryl J. Hobbs, executive director for rural development and professor of sociology at UMC, presented data on each of the eight districts being considered for the nomination.

They include the following regional planning commissions in Missouri — Green Hills, Kaysinger Basin, Lake of the Ozarks, Meramec, Missouri Valley, Northeast Missouri, Northwest Missouri, and South Central Ozarks.

The data included rankings in agricultural involvement, economic diversification, need, growth potential, communications, physician manpower, and county expenditures.

The council narrowed the field to two districts, pending further investigation and willingness of personnel in the two districts to participate in the pilot program.

Europe marching toward grain self-sufficiency

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Western Europe, one of the world's largest markets for U.S. farm products, is rapidly on its way to becoming self-sufficient in grain and may move into international markets as an exporter much sooner than earlier expected.

The march by Europe toward self-sufficiency in grain was analyzed today in an Agriculture Department report. It was written by Donald M. Phillips Jr., a farming demand specialist in the department's Economic Research Service.

Phillips cautioned, however, that estimates for European production — centered in European Community countries — are subject to change. But he acknowledged that "it is already evident" grain production is growing faster than forecast earlier by U.S. experts.

The impact on U.S. agriculture, if Europe attains self-sufficiency and becomes a net grain exporter, could be severe, the report indicated.

Phillips cited a recent study made by Prof. F. Uhlmann of the West German Institute of Agriculture Marketing Research. Uhlmann calculated the original six members of the Community — Belgium, France, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands and West Germany — will "attain virtual self-sufficiency" by 1975 and could be exporting as much as four million metric tons of grain by 1985.

Including the nine member countries — Denmark, Ireland and Britain are recent newcomers — Uhlmann said the community could grow enough grain for its own needs by 1985.

Phillips noted that other studies of European agriculture also have pointed toward the community becoming a diminished market for U.S. farmers in the near future.

A projection by Phillips' own agency showed recently that the European Community's purchase of foreign grain probably will drop to 1.3 million metric tons by 1985.

Phillips said U.S. grain sales to the community in 1972-73 totaled 13.3 million metric tons worth more than $900 million. During the first seven months of the current fiscal year, which began last July 1, shipments were 8.1 million tons.

"While the EC probably will continue to import some high-quality U.S. wheat as well as large quantities of corn, an over-all sharp decline in U.S. grain exports to the community seems inevitable, given the continuation of existing policies," Phillips said.

American rivers to transport energy

ASHLAND, Ky. (AP) — The energy crisis will spur growth in use of American rivers to transport fuel supplies, said Orin E. Atkins, chairman of Ashland Oil Inc. Over the next 20 years, most of the increase in inland waterway shipping will be in petroleum and its products and in coal, he said.

Atkins said the country badly needs offshore port facilities for supertankers in order to move crude oil and other petroleum products to vessels that ply the nation's inland waterways.

A field trip has been planned to see the conversion of brush land to grass land. Extension agents Buehler and Roberts at Versailles will show us two timber farms which have been practicing some aerial spraying for three years. They say they can show us good stands of fescue on land that was aerial sprayed last June, burnt off, and aerial seeded in the fall of 1973.

They have enough land contracted in Morgan County to bring in an aerial applicator and it would be possible probably to get some timber sprayed this summer in Pettis County.

If you are interested, or know of a neighbor who would be, tell them about this field trip next Friday afternoon, April 19. The field trip will start from the Herbert Bockelman farm at 1:15 p.m., seven miles southeast on BBB after leaving 135, south of Florence. I will be leaving the Pettis County Extension office at 11:15 a.m. if you want a ride.

Soybean diseases worsen

(Democrat-Capital Service)

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Soybean disease problems are getting worse, a University of Missouri-Columbia plant pathologist reported recently.

When soybeans were first introduced to this country, said Einar Palm, they were practically free from serious diseases. Now they are plagued by diseases that affect every part of the plant.

"Further in-depth research to control these diseases should have high priority," Palm told growers attending the state soybean conference.

State Extension plant pathology and agronomy specialists, working cooperatively with area Extension specialists, are monitoring diseases in strategic soybean growing areas. Their findings and recommendations are retransmitted to growers and specialists via tele-reports, radio and newsletters.

The worst soybean disease in Missouri is charcoal rot. "It infects almost every soybean field in the state," said Palm. "Losses may hit 40 per cent or more in individual fields."

Until recently, experts thought charcoal rot hit only mature plants and was induced mainly by hot, dry weather. But Thomas Wylie, UMC plant pathology researcher, showed the disease can infect young plants, even seedlings, and even without hot, dry weather.

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Burglars escaped with about $10,000 in cash and an estimated $10,000 in personal possessions, police said, in a break-in over the weekend at the home of C. F. Allen.

Among items missing, Allen told police, were 17 rifles and shotguns, two watches, two electric guitars, several coin collections, two cameras, jewelry, and the children's piggy banks.

Ice skates were common in Scandinavia during the Viking era, and Norse warriors ranked prowess on the ice nearly as high as fighting.

Two men charged in store robbery

TROY, Mo. (AP) — Charges of armed robbery were filed Sunday by Lincoln County authorities against two St. Louis men accused of holding up an Elsberry liquor store.

Sherriff's authorities said George F. Lindner, 49, and Phillip M. Tierney, 33, were arrested Saturday night at Louisiana, Mo., shortly after Ralph & Helen's Drive-In Liquor Store at Elsberry was held up at gunpoint.

Recovered in their possession, authorities said, was more than $3,000 taken from the store. There were no injuries.

The man in black

Nine iron shot on 17 carries Player home

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Gary Player was striding down the 17th fairway at the Augusta National Golf Club, a white cap pulled low over his eyes, and was pondering his second shot to a hard, fast green that had been his nemesis for nearly two decades.

"I haven't hit this green six times in the 18 years I've been playing here," he said to his caddy, Eddie McCoy. "But it won for me in 1961 and it's going to win for us again."

The little South African, dressed in black from neck to shoes, took a deliberate stance and let fly with a nine-iron. The ball described a beautiful arc and plopped to within six inches of the pin—a virtual tapin for a birdie three.

That one dramatic shot broke the logjam among four leaders Sunday and decided the 38th Masters Tournament. Player winning it at 10 under par—two strokes ahead of Dave Stockton and Tom Weiskopf.

Player, 37, from far off Johannesburg, repeated a victory he first scored in 1961—a record 13-year gap—and fixed his sights on new horizons.

"This gives me the first leg on the Grand Slam," Player said, referring to the four major championships—U.S. and British Opens, the PGA and Masters—which no man has ever won in a single year.

"At least, I am the only man with a chance this year to win it."

It is the last major goal also of Jack Nicklaus, holder of a record 14 major championships who made a spectacular comeback from behind to win a fifth Masters' crown with an eagle at the par-five 13th, only to falter with bogeys at the 14th and 16th.

At one stage in the exciting Easter Sunday showdown, Big Jack, Player and Weiskopf were tied for the lead with Stockton only a stroke behind and pressure building from such sources as Bobby Nichols, Frank Beard, Jim Colbert, Phil Rodgers and Dave Hill.

Player finished with a 278, the first prize of $35,000 and the traditional green Masters jacket, which was a couple of sizes too big.

Weiskopf and Stockton tied at 280. Nicklaus tied for third at 281 with Irwin and Colbert. Nichols and Rodgers were at 282 and a happy Englishman, Maurice Bembridge, shot a record-breaking 64 to finish at 283 with Hubert Green.

Arnold Palmer, a four-time winner seeking to recapture some of his old glories, shot his best round in the Masters since 1962 with a 67 but finished at 284.

Player planned to fly out immediately with his wife, Vivienne, and five of their six children, for the Spanish Open, starting Wednesday.

But his main sights will be on the U.S. Open in June at Winged Foot in Mamaroneck, N.Y.

Player already has two British Opens (1959, 1968), two American PGAs (1962, 1972), two Masters (1961, 1974) and one U.S. Open (1965). Nicklaus' 14 major crowns include at least three of everything except the British Open.

"I have won more major championships than any other foreign player who ever lived," Player said. "I think I have moved ahead of James Braid, who won six British Opens."

Player forgot Harry Vardon, who won six British Opens besides the U.S. Open in 1900.

"I have traveled more, practiced more and made more sacrifices than any golfer I know," the little South African insisted. "I am gratified that this has been another of my rewards."

Player works by the hours on the practice tee, refining his skills. The game has not produced a more deliberate workman.

"They always have said that it takes a long hitter to win here at Augusta," he said. "I disagree. I think placement of the iron shots is more important. You don't have to brutalize this course to win. You can win by good management."

Player is a mighty mite by most standards, standing only 5 feet, 8 inches and weighing 150 pounds. he has powerful forearms and his arms are exceptionally long, falling almost to his knees.

Player has constantly sought to better relations with blacks in this country. He invited Lee Elder to play in South Africa. He tipped his caddy here this week $3,500 and also gave the black bag-toter a new set of golf clubs and a complete wardrobe.

Leaky defense throttles Cards

PITTSBURGH (AP) — It was a weekend of defensive disaster in the Pittsburgh Pirates infield, and guilt went around the horn. Six different players committed a total of 10 infield errors, and Pittsburgh lost three of four games with the St. Louis Cardinals.

The exception was Pittsburgh's 8-4 win to open a doubleheader Sunday. It was the Pirates' first win this season after six losses and shortstop Dal Maxvill had the only error.

However, St. Louis won the second game 6-5 with the help of four Pirate errors, including a wild toss by second baseman Rennie Stennett that allowed two runs.

"So far, the Pirates have just been doing things to beat themselves," offered Cardinal pitcher John Curtis, winner of the second game.

Last Friday night, third baseman Richie Hebner committed two of three Pirate errors and St. Louis won 7-6 in 11 innings.

On Saturday, a throwing error by Maxville allowed two runs and two more scored when a throw to the plate eluded catcher Ed Kirkpatrick. St. Louis won that game 6-4.

"You just can't play baseball in our league and give the other team more than three outs an inning," acknowledged Pirate Manager Danny Murtaugh. "That what's happened on this homestand," he added.

"We're just not playing good defensive ball in our infield."

What's the answer? A switch in players?

"You don't go with different people," Murtaugh responded. "You've just got to go out and play through it."

Nonetheless, Murtaugh saw some bring spots Sunday, chiefly Stargell's homer in the first game.

The two-run belt, Stargell's first this season, helped Pittsburgh score five runs in the fourth inning to stake starter Bob Moose to an 8-2 lead.

"Power hitters go in streaks. They hit one and it gets a streak going," Murtaugh said.

"Willie's the big man in our lineup, and if he goes on a streak, well, . . ."

Moose allowed a total of 14 hits and all four Cardinal runs, but he still won the game and lasted 7-2-3 innings, longer than any other Pirate starter this season.

The second game, delayed three times by rain, was tied 3-3 in the third inning.

Then Ted Simmons reached first with two outs when first baseman Bob Robertson dropped a throw from shortstop Dal Maxville for an error.

Luis Melendez then singled off Hebner's glove at third to move Ted Simmons to second.

Blyleven handcuffs Royals

Bert Blyleven, Minnesota's ace right-hander, bites his tongue on his follow-through to Kansas City's Hal McRae in the fifth inning of Sunday's game in Bloomington, Minn. McRae flew out to center field on a later pitch. Blyleven got his second win of the season against no losses as he and reliever Bill Campbell combined to pitch a seven-hit shutout. (UPI)

Kansas City tumbles 8-0

Bobby Darwin fattens average against Royals

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota Twins Manager Frank Quilici said he always worries in such situations, even when his team has a big lead, as it did over the Kansas City Royals.

Twins' right fielder Bob Darwin, who slugged a grand slam homer, two singles and a triple, raised his batting average to .500, also was concerned.

"I think everybody is worried," said Darwin after the Twins bombed the Royals 8-0 Sunday. "I think Calvin Griffith is worried about that." Griffith is the president and owner of the Twins.

The object of the concern was star right-hander Bert Blyleven, who had to leave the game in the eighth inning because of an arm injury.

"It's just a knot. It feels good now. It's gone now," said Blyleven after the game. "I'll just rest it and see how it feels tomorrow morning."

Reliever Bill Campbell retired the last five batters to preserve the shutout.

The Twins manager said he always worries about young pitchers' arms when they have to work in weather like Sunday, when the temperature was 35 degrees at game time and winds gusted up to 32 miles per hour.

Blyleven, now 2-0 after winning 20 games last season, lowered his earned run average to 1.45 with 7-1-3 scoreless innings. The rest of the Twins staff has a combined ERA of 7.89.

Asked how important Blyleven was to the Twins, Quilici said: "He's the gun."

Darwin was more specific.

Tigers stop Sooners 5-4

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Missouri handed Oklahoma its first defeat in 15 games Friday, but the Sooners' perch atop the Big Eight standings was made even more secure by developments elsewhere.

Second-place Oklahoma State could manage to win only one of three against struggling Kansas.

Oklahoma, which took two out of three from Missouri at Columbia, is 8-1 in conference play while Oklahoma State slipped to 6-3.

The rest of the standings have Kansas State and Missouri tied for third at 5-4 — the Wildcats lost three times to Colorado; Iowa State 4-4 after beating Nebraska twice; Colorado, 4-5; Kansas, 3-6, and Nebraska, 0-8.

Oklahoma's winning string was cut, 5-4, in the opener of its doubleheader with the Tigers, but the Sooners came back with a vengeance in the nightcap, 7-0. In Saturday's rubber match, both teams produced 43 hits — eight of Missouri's coming in the eighth inning — but the Sooners prevailed, 17-14.

Oklahoma State jumped on Kansas in the opener of their Friday doubleheader with two-run homers in the first two innings by Dan Massari and Rick Magee en route to an 11-1 victory.

Kansas rebounded in the nightcap and the rubber game Saturday, however, on three-hit pitching by Roger Slagle — a 4-0 shutout Friday — and a six-hitter and some sharp offensive production by Kurt Knoff. He scored from second base in the second inning Saturday on an error, drove in a run with a triple in the fifth, then scored on a wild pitch.

Colorado hurt Kansas State's chance with identical 6-2 scores Friday and by a 4-1 margin Saturday.

Iowa State denied Nebraska its first conference win in a doubleheader Saturday, 4-0, 10-3. The make-up game scheduled for Sunday because of wet grounds Friday was postponed because of bad weather.

New face in the crowd

American women set 15 records

DALLAS (AP) — America has discovered a new women's swimming sensation and a large dose of confidence in the wake of a record-smashing 1974 National AAU Indoor Short-course Swimming championships.

Shy, 15-year-old Jenni Franks of Wilmington, Del., shocked AAU officials with an American record in the 400-yard individual medley Thursday night. She was such an unknown, having participated in only two previous AAU meets, that she wasn't even in the AAU press guide.

Miss Franks' fairytale story climaxed a four-day sack of American records by America's women swimmers. They established 15 of the new standards posted in the meet ending Saturday night which saw 22 marks fall.

Now, the American women are taking dead aim on competition with the East German women who humiliated them in the World Games last summer in Belgrade where the East Germans, wearing skintight, see-through swimsuits, bagged 10 gold medals to three for the Americans.

The American women are now using the skin-tight suits themselves and going faster than ever.

"I think this means the East Germans aren't as far above everybody as people thought," said Lynn Colella, one of the American record holders.

She added "American girls are driving now instead of waiting for the 1976 Olympics to get ready. The East Germans have scared us with their times. Now, American girls want to prove they can match those times without having to take drugs and other things the East Germans are doing."

American women and men are scheduled to meet an East German team in Concord, Calif., early this fall.

Flip Darr, who will coach the United States team in the dual meet against the East Germans, said "It's the most dramatic drop in times we've ever had in any year."

"I was very pleased to see the times with the new suits . . . whether it was mental or physical I'm not sure, but I'll take it anyway. It will make 'em go back to their slide rules in Germany."

Rhodesian captures first Monaco cup

By The Associated Press

Andrew Pattison of Rhodesia captured his first World Championship Tennis title and Australia's John Newcombe got his fourth of the year in pro tennis tournaments this week.

Pattison's victory came Sunday at the Monte Carlo Open, overlooking the casinos and splendor of the small principality of Monaco. He beat Ilie Nastase of Romania 5-7, 6-3, 6-4, and, with Prince Rainier looking on, also became the first Rhodesian to win the Prince of Monaco Cup.

Nastase had beaten Pattison two months ago at Richmond, Va., but the Rhodesian, after losing in 12 games the first set, came out and broke Nastase's service in the second set.

Newcombe won in a Blue Group tournament at Orlando, Fla., with some difficulty disposing of unseeded Jaime Fillol 6-2, 3-6, 6-3. The Australian faltered in the second set when the 85-degree weather appeared to sap his strength, but rallied in the final set with one service break.

Chris Evert overcame a first-set deficit to beat Evonne Goolagong 6-4, 6-0 and win the title at Sarasota, Fla. Miss Evert, who collected $10,000 for her victory, was down 4-2 in the first set before coming on to win.

In a WCT Green Group tournament at Tokyo, Australian veteran Rod Laver overcame heavy winds to beat Spain's Juan Gisbert 5-7, 6-2, 6-0 and take first-place prize money of $10,000.

Laver made frequent errors in the first set and threw his racquet down in disgust when he lost the first game of the second set after moving to a 40love lead with Gisbert serving.

Heard the one about the birds ...

Horton shoots down 'birds' while Yaz bangs up Tigers

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Major league baseball found out about the birds and the bees Sunday.

The American League got the bird while the National League got the bees.

A swarm of bees in San Diego took over the home plate area in San Diego, briefly delaying the Padres' game against San Francisco—but that's another story.

The bird was a victim of a "fowl" ball hit by Detroit's Willie Horton. And the Tigers were the victims of a couple of balls hit very fair...and very far...by Boston's Carl Yastrzemski, carrying the Red Sox to a 7-5 triumph.

In other American League games, Minnesota mauled Kansas City 8-0 and California trimmed Chicago 6-3 and, in a pair of doubleheaders, Oakland topped Texas 4-2, then the Rangers rebounded 10-2 in the nightcap, and the New York Yankees whipped Cleveland 9-5 before the Indians took the second game 9-6. Baltimore's game at Milwaukee was rained out.

Red Sox 7, Tigers 5

The ball, hit by Horton struck and killed a pigeon passing over old Fenway Park, landed only a few feet in front of home plate.

The popup by Horton in the ninth inning hit the pigeon, which fell dead immediately in front of home plate.

"It scared the hell outa me," said Boston catcher Bob Montgomery. "I jumped a foot in the air—and Willie jumped even higher."

What killed the Tigers was Yaz' bat. He drove in two runs in the first inning with a booming double and later scored on Dwight Evans' home run.

Then Yaz crashed a homer of his own, a third-inning shot that proved to be the winning run. Ed Brinkman drove in three of Detroit's runs.

Angels 6, White Sox 3

Frank Robinson drove in a pair of runs with a homer—the 555th of his career—and a single and Dick Selma slammed the door on Chicago to lead the Angels, leaders in the West, to their sixth victory in eight games and keep the White Sox in the cellar with their sixth loss in seven.

Selma replaced Frank Tanana on in the seventh inning with the bases loaded and none out, got pinch-hitter Carlos May to hit into a force play at the plate and then got Dick Allen to ground into a doubleplay.

A's 4-2, Rangers 2-10

Reggie Jackson cracked two home runs, the second one a three-run eighth-inning job, to boost Oakland past the Rangers. He's hit five homers this year, all against Texas.

In the second game, though, it was Dave Nelson who feasted. He drove in six runs with a three-run homer, a two-run single and a sacrifice fly, to bring the Ferguson Jenkins and the Rangers a twinbill split.

Yanks 9-6, Indians 5-9

The Yankees, making like the Bronx Bombers of old, won the opener on six homers, including two by Graig Nettles and one each by Thurman Munson, Ron Blomberg, Bobby Murcer and Mike Hegan.

Nettles also homered twice in the nightcap—but so did Cleveland's Dave Duncan. His timely hits, and John Ellis' four runs batted in, carried the Indians to victory in the nightcap.

Basketball playoffs

Celtics go one up on NY

BOSTON (AP) — The New York Knicks are hoping that history repeats, but with captain John Havlicek healthy and in top form, the Boston Celtics figure to be even tougher this year in the National Basketball Association's Eastern Conference playoff final.

The Celtics got off to a quick start in the best-of-seven series, whipping the Knicks 113-88 Sunday with a tough defense and hot shooting. The teams will play Game 2 in New York Tuesday night.

The series opener was virtually a replay of the first game between the same clubs last year, the Celtics drubbing the Knicks 134-108. However, the Knicks rebounded in New York 129-96 in the second game and went on to win the series and the NBA championship.

Havlicek, a superstar, suffered a shoulder injury in the third game last year and the Celtics were unable to compensate. The shoulder mended during the off-season and the 12-year pro from Ohio State is flying.

Dividing his time between a forward position and the backcourt, Havlicek scored 25 points, collected 12 assists and grabbed four rebounds before being removed with 9:15 left and the Celtics in command with a 93-64 lead.

"Havlicek did it all," said New York star Walt Frazier. "He's always moving, and can make shots on the run. You can get the best position on him and he still gets the ball off. You can't relax on him. We're going to have to stop the Celtics from running. We didn't today."

The winner of the Boston-New York series will face the winner of the Milwaukee-Chicago Western Conference series for the NBA title. The Bucks and Bulls play the first game of their best-of-seven set Tuesday night at Milwaukee.

The American Basketball Association also is into its league semifinals. In the East Division, the New York Nets, leading Kentucky 1-0, meet the Colonels tonight in Game 2 at Uniondale, N.Y., and in the West, the Utah Stars, with a 1-0 advantage over Indiana, face the Pacers again tonight at Salt Lake City.

The Celtics hit 44 of 85 shots for a lopsided victory before a crowd of 14,101 and a national television audience. New York hit on only 34 of 103 field goal attempts, a poor 33 per cent.

Havlicek broke a 23-23 tie early in the second period and the Celtics went on to continually break through New York's defense, outscoring the Knicks 18-4 in a six-minute stretch to pull away for good.

In the NBA West, Chicago, which never had advanced past the opening round of the playoffs in six previous attempts, barely made it this time, holding off the Detroit Pistons 96-94 Saturday in the final game of their bristling, best-of-seven series. The Bulls built an early 19-point lead, then withstood a furious Detroit rally.

Chet Walker paced the Bulls with 26 points. Meanwhile, Milwaukee has been resting since eliminating Los Angeles in five games on Apr. 7.

In the ABA, the Nets opened the East Division final Saturday night with a 119-106 thrashing of Kentucky. Julius Erving paced the Nets with 35 points and rookie Larry Kenon added 20 points and a game-high 15 rebounds, but it was the strong defensive job by New York's Billy Paultz on the Colonels' 7-foot-2 Artis Gilmore that proved vital. Paultz held Gilmore to 13 points and 10 rebounds.

Utah began the ABA West final with a 105-96 victory over tired Indiana Saturday night. Willie Wise led the Stars with 34 points, including 17 in the crucial fourth period when Utah overcame a slight deficit. George McGinnis topped the Pacers with 39 points.

Flyers snuff out Flames; Bruins eliminate Toronto

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

Philadelphia Coach Fred Shero got mugged in Atlanta, then the Flyers went out and gagged the Flames...with the help of the National Hockey League's "bad boy," Dave Schultz.

With Shero back in Philadelphia recovering from the attack outside an Atlanta hotel Saturday night, the Flyers ended the Flames' playoff hopes Sunday night, beating them 4-3 on Schultz' goal at 5:40 of sudden death overtime.

The victory gave the Flyers a four-game sweep of the scheduled best-of-seven quarter-final Stanley Cup series and put them into the semifinals against either the Montreal Canadiens or New York Rangers.

The Rangers squared their series against Montreal at 2-2, rallying for a 6-4 victory over the Canadiens Sunday.

The other semifinal will send the Boston Bruins against either the Chicago Black Hawks or Los Angeles Kings. The Bruins eliminated Toronto in four straight games with a 4-3 overtime triumph Sunday, while the Kings gained their first victory in four games against Chicago with a 5-1 decision as Tom Williams fired in three goals.

In the World Hockey Association playoffs Sunday, the Houston Aeros and Minnesota Fighting Saints advanced to the semifinals. Houston completed a four-game, quarter-final sweep over Winnipeg, beating the Jets 5-4, while Minnesota topped the Edmonton Oilers 5-4 for a 4-1 series triumph.

The New England Whalers, defending WHA champions, squared their quarter-final series against Chicago 3-3, blanking the Cougars 2-0. The winner of that series will face the winner of the Cleveland-Toronto series in the semifinals. Cleveland edged the Toros 3-2 in overtime Saturday, but Toronto still leads the series 3-1. The 49-year-old Shero, jumped by two men following a team meeting, suffered only a few scratches, but he complained of feeling dizzy and was sent home to rest.

Then the notorious Schultz, who set an NHL record with 348 minutes in penalties this season, went out and attacked the Flames, slapping an eight-footer past Atlanta goalie Phil Myre for the winning goal, capping a Philadelphia comeback from a 3-0 deficit.

Rangers 6, Canadiens 4

The Rangers also staged a strong comeback, erasing a 3-1 Montreal lead with the aid of Ted Irvine's two goals, then broke a 4-4 tie on Bruce MacGregor's score with less than five minutes to play.

Bruins 4, Maple Leafs 3

Ken Hodge, hung in effigy by some Toronto fans who apparently thought he was too vicious, got retribution by scoring Boston's winning goal, at 1:27 of sudden-death overtime. It was his second goal of the game.

"I can't understand why the fans in Toronto think I'm vicious," said Hodge. "In Boston, the fans boo me because they wish I was even tougher."

Kings 5, Black Hawks 1

Williams' three consecutive goals all came within a 6:18 span of the third period, tying a Stanley Cup record held by seven others. They followed a goal by Juha Widing, which had broken a 1-1 tie. The fifth game will be played Tuesday night at Chicago.

Lubanski still knockin' 'em down at age of 45

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — He looks just the same, still throws a two-hole bowling ball and still packs a friendly smile. To top it off, he still is a tough competitor despite the fact he's bowling only one night a week.

It's still the same bowling immortal Eddie Lubanski of Detroit who performed Sunday night in the American Bowling Congress tournament team event.

The 45-year-old Lubanski didn't show the 205-average style like he once did. But he did start with a 190 before his second game of 161 and a finish of 196 for a total of 547 pins. Lubanski stood the bowling world on end many times since coming into the limelight back in the 1950s. In 1959 he was voted Bowler of the Year by the Bowling Writers Association of America.

The same year Lubanski captured the World Invitational title in Chicago.

With a lifetime average of 203-plus in the masters tourney, Lubanski has averaged 207 in the ABC proper for the past 10 years.

After his Sunday games, Lubanski said he "didn't finish properly. It started to come up and then it would stop."

Lubanski, who has never turned professional, feels bowling is too much of a fun game. "When you're a professional it suddenly becomes work," he says. "Then it's no longer fun."

Rolla pair moves into fifth place

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — John Boze and Frank Williams, of Rolla, Mo., moved into fifth place in the American Bowling Congress tournament regular doubles Sunday and also notched a tourney record for 1,300-plus series.

They combined for 1,337, which was the 18th 1,300-plus series of the meet topping the previous record of 17 set in 1967.

Williams, a former Gary, Ind., resident, had a 697 while Boze added 640.

... and the bees?

Padres outlast Giants, bees

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

The San Diego Padres can wait until the National League approves the designated hitter rule, but they'll keep a designated exterminator on hand — just in case bees decide they like the surroundings in San Diego Stadium.

The bees put up a tenacious struggle to keep baseball from being played Sunday.

They swarmed around the home plate area before the game started, preventing the Padres and San Francisco Giants from taking batting practice and delaying the start of the game for 26 minutes until the exterminator made his appearance.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates topped the St. Louis Cardinals 8-4 in the first game of a twinbill but lost the second game 6-5; the Philadelphia Phillies swept the New York Mets 2-1 and 5-3 in a doubleheader; and the Los Angeles Dodgers drubbed the Houston Astros 7-2.

The Cincinnati at Atlanta and Montreal at Chicago games were postponed by rain, with no makeup dates announced.

"I don't know what attracted them. I've never seen anything like this in baseball before," said John McNamara, manager of the embarrassed Padres. Some of the buzzing bees just wouldn't leave and the spray can made an appearance after nearly every half-inning.

The Padres won the game, by the way. Bobby Tolan's double scored Clarence Gaston to cap a five-run San Diego eighth inning and bring about a 6-5 victory.

Gary Matthews had put San Francisco in front 5-1 with a three-run homer in the seventh inning. But San Diego, with its new mascots, rallied to win.

Phillies 2-5, Mets 1-3

The Phillies wrapped up both games in the late innings, taking the opener on a successful suicide squeeze bunt by Bill Robinson in the 11th and winning the second on a two-run double by Mike Anderson in the ninth.

The Mets managed only one run—Rusty Staub's first homer of the season—in the first game, despite 15 hits. Larry Bowa opened the Philadelphia 11th with a double off New York reliever Tug McGraw. Bowa moved to third on Mike Anderson's infield hit, then charged the plate with Robinson at bat.

The Phils were checked on two hits through seven innings of the second game, but broke through for two in the eighth and three in the ninth.

Dodgers 7, Astros 2

Ron Cey collected three singles and Jimmy Wynn added two—including his fourth home run of the season and a triple—to spark a 15-hit Los Angeles attack and swamp the Astros.

Tommy John gave up seven hits in winning his third game.

Conference committee to take up appropriations

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Appropriations negotiations are expected to occupy a good portion of the week as Missouri legislators return from the Easter recess.

A conference committee of the House and Senate is expected to take up differences in House and Senate approved versions of the spending measures tonight.

The conference committee will attempt to work out differences which have put the Senate versions about $66 million lower than the House passed measures. However, the Senate total for spending money from state taxes is only $10 million less than the House.

A total of about $2 billion is involved in the appropriations bills. As the session moves toward the closing date of April 30, another issue expected to involve the Senate is campaign finance reform.

Senate President Pro Tem William J. Cason, D-Clinton, says the reform bill will probably come up for Senate debate next week.

He says he has no plans to attempt to take the bill out of order unless it appears that the bill will not be reached in time to allow "a day or two" of debate.

Cason says reports that he was responsible for a substitute bill circulated in the Senate Elections Committee were untrue.

He acknowledges some input into the substitute bill but says his participation was minor.

He says he will introduce a substitute bill and is still working on some major provisions of it. However, some important points will include cutting the amount a candidate or his family can spend from the $35,000 provided in the House bill, increasing the limit under which donors can keep their names from the public from the $25 provided in the House bill and providing for a "check-off" system for donations on Missouri income tax returns.

While there may be some possibility that raising the donation limit under which names do not have to be reported, Cason says, there should be an overriding concern about keeping the small donor active.

Cason also says that under his bill the names of contributors who are allowed to remain unknown must be maintained by a candidate and made available to the Elections Commission upon its request. Those names would also be subject to subpoena, he says.

The secretary of state should have some function in the makeup of the Elections Commission, Cason maintains, although he is not sure what the final version of his substitute will provide.

Housewife reports jury duty go-round

DETROIT (AP) — Helen Mueller is a shy, 102-pound housewife who said she "really felt sort of proud" when she was called for federal jury duty.

But that was before she found out what jury duty was like.

After 20 days' service over three months, she stomped into U.S. District Court here to give Judge Fred W. Kaess a good bawling out.

"If I ever get in trouble, I'll never ask for a jury trial," she told the startled judge. "I don't want to be judged by a group of angry, frustrated people."

"We were herded around like animals, from one pen to another. Nobody says welcome, or tells you what the rules are, or what your rights are or what's going on around you. Most of the time you just sit, not knowing what it is you're waiting for."

"People become very resentful," Mrs. Mueller told the judge last week. "You'd be surprised how many jurors say they'll never vote again, because jurors names are drawn from the registered voters. I think that's terrible!"

Judge Kaess agreed and said a judicial committee was working on jury system reform.

The Drayton Plains woman said that the required 20 days of jury duty can stretch into six months if a juror is never chosen for a trial. So jurors stretch the truth a little during their examination just to get on a case and get the whole thing over with, she said.

"I don't mean the jurors lie," she said. "But for example, I've learned not to say what my husband's profession is. If I say he's a social worker, I'm excused right away. I learned very quickly to say he is a director for a family service agency. That's OK."

For another, the jurors aren't notified when a case is dismissed or settled out of court. "You might have to come in and sit all day only to be told to go home. And you never knew why," she said.

But Mrs. Mueller said the capper was the day she telephoned the emergency number to tell the court she couldn't show up because of a medical problem. She said she got a recorded message that told her what time to be on duty.

Resisting pressure

Russell R. Train, the nation's environmental chief, said Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation" he is resisting White House pressure to cut back federal grants to states for enforcing and monitoring anti-pollution programs. Train acknowledged that the Office of Management and Budget has informed him that President Nixon favors a phasing out of enforcement and monitoring money earmarked for states. (UPI)

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Smoking can hurt in several ways

Dear Dr. Lamb — Sometime ago I read your column about the man who had his legs amputated because he would not quit smoking.

Would you please clearly explain why smoking caused this problem requiring leg amputation? My husband smokes from one to two packs a day. He is bothered by leg cramps. Some time ago his ankles swelled and stayed that way for a long time. After that his left leg swelled, and he was treated for blood clots. He is 64 and has a peptic ulcer. He can take a little Maalox along and get by. He said he would try to quit smoking if he thought the leg problems were caused by smoking.

Dear Reader — Your husband has two problems that should require him to quit smoking NOW, not to mention the dangers of lung disease and heart disease. I refer to the ulcer and the leg problems.

The case I wrote about was a man with Burger's disease, a disease that causes thickening of the arteries in the legs and blocks the circulation.

More importantly, a recent study by Dr. Peter Levine at Tufts-New England Medical Center has demonstrated that smoking increases blood clotting. Here is how it works. There are some very small cells in the blood called platelets. They are important in forming a blood clot whenever we need a clot to stop bleeding. The clots that cause blockage of arteries in heart attacks and similar problems are largely composed of blood platelets.

Dr. Levine's study showed that within five minutes of smoking a single cigarette the platelets began to clump and form plugs, or in other words to start the formation of blood clots. This is very important since it demonstrates how cigarette smoking can lead to an increased incidence of blood clots in the arteries to the heart. It also tells you how many cigarettes are safe for a person to smoke — the answer is none. A single cigarette can cause the increased clotting reaction. If just one clot forms in the wrong place, you can have a problem.

So, since your husband already has a blood clotting problem, I think he should quit smoking right now. I don't mean taper off or cut down. I mean quit completely and forever.

It will cut down his need for Maalox, too.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have read that grapefruit burns up fat and is therefore excellent for weight reduction. Please explain this myth, or truism.

Dear Reader — You were right the first time. It is a myth or, in plainer words, pure hokum.

The calories in grapefruit are still calories and contribute to the total number of calories eaten. They do have a relatively low calorie content per weight or bulk, and they are good food, but that is as far as it goes. (NEA)

Interest, activities are holding stock market down

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — More than two factors are holding down the stock market but you'd find yourself with a following if you chose only two: High interest rates and the activities of institutions.

High rates mean that bonds compete with stocks for the investment dollar, reducing the flow of money that in more normal times might be expected to tend in the direction of equities. Moreover, high interest rates cut into the profits of corporations by adding to costs, just as do increases in labor or raw material prices.

The activities of institutions, it is argued, are resulting in a two-tier market, with shares of a favored group of less than 100 companies attracting considerable interest and the rest of the market little interest at all.

Officers of some companies complain that they simply cannot interest portfolio managers of the institutions — mutual and pension funds, bank trusts and insurance companies — in the attractiveness of their wares.

In addition, they contend that when the institutions do become involved with shares of some of the smaller and lesser known companies they tend to dominate the market and sometimes produce sharp price movements.

"These practices alienated — and still do — the small investors and harmed many well-managed second- and third-tier companies," said C.V. Wood, Jr., chairman of the Committee of Publicly Owned Companies earlier this month.

The committee, observing its first anniversary, is made up of 632 corporations with total assets of more than $55 billion and 2.5 million shareholders whose shares are traded on most of the big exchanges.

Wood noted that for the second straight year, there are 800,000 fewer shareholders of American companies. Indicative of lagging interest in the market, only 99 new issues were marketed in 1973 compared with 568 in 1972.

This lack of interest in stocks has led to some of the lowest price-earnings multiples in decades. The committee claims that three-fifths of "leading" companies have multiples below 10, meaning their shares are priced at less than 10 times earnings.

Multiple problems result from low price-earnings multiples, and it's anyone's choice as to which are the worst.

For one thing, corporations badly need equity capital in order to maintain and expand their plants and equipment. The committee estimates that between now and 1985 the country will need $3.3 trillion in new capital simply to provide jobs and goods for an expanding population.

A problem of perhaps equal magnitude is that many of the companies in the second tier have stock prices so depressed that they are increasingly the target of takeovers by foreign concerns.

Japanese place new emphasis on research

MACHIDA, Japan (AP) — Dr. Hiroshi Kawamura is back in Japan again studying how the brain works, after spending 10 years of research at medical centers in the United States and Italy.

His return home to Japan is symbolic of the rising status of scientists in Japan, although the country still relies heavily on technology imported from overseas.

Western and Japanese sources believe there are increasing signs that Japan's scientific establishment is coming up to par with other major nations, particularly in some areas of the computer, chemical and electronic industries.

Also, engineers for Japan's Honda and Mazda car makers have developed some of the world's most pollution-free auto engines which are getting wide attention in the United States.

But Dr. Kawamura, 46, isn't trying for some new commercial breakthrough. He spends his time surrounded by electrodes, sophisticated electronic test equipment and a small computer, studying the brains of house cats. He thinks they also indicate how the largely unknown human brain functions.

"I couldn't expect to join this type of institute 10 years ago when I left Japan," Kawamura explains. He says he has three times as much laboratory equipment available to him now as he had in the United States.

And his return to Japan meant a "little but not much" of a cut in his $18,000 annual salary.

He was on the payroll of the University of Michigan while working at the Lafayette Clinic in Detroit. He also did research at the University of California in Los Angeles and at the University of Pisa in Italy before going to Michigan.

Kawamura's laboratories are in the Mitsubishi Chemical Co.'s nonprofit Institute of Life Sciences which it set up in 1971 at a cost of $6.6 million.

The institute has about 100 staff members and is on a high hill overlooking Machida, a quiet town about 25 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Few of Japan's scientists are as lucky as Dr. Kawamura. But more and more time and money is being spent in Japan on research and development, according to various sources.

Total expenditures by government and business for scientific and technological studies in Japan in fiscal 1972 were $5.9 billion, according to the prime minister's office. That was an increase of 17 per cent over the previous year.

Evidence of this increased spending in Japan is easy to see. University laboratories are better equipped than ever before, although many of the buildings are still rat traps by U.S. standards.

Japan does not have large-scale military and space research programs like the United States. Only about 25 per cent of Japan's R and D spending is paid for by government. Business pays the rest.

Various independent research institutes have been set up by businesses. For instance, Keidanren, the big business organization, has set up an Oceanographic Research Institute at Yokosuka, south of Tokyo.

It hopes to develop the technology for underwater habitats which could be built in Japan and exported to other countries.

bridge builders and others utilizing the seas.

The single largest government project to promote research is the creation of "Science City" at Tsukuba, about 35 miles northeast of Tokyo.

It will cost about $1.6 billion and will create a community of 100,000 or so scientists and their families. At least 43 government research and training institutes and also some university labs will be moved to the site during the next several years.

ACLU files suit on behalf of book seller

BRECKENRIDGE HILLS, Mo. (AP) — They won't let Dennis Nix sell books about Nazism here, so he's suing them.

And he's got the American Civil Liberties Union on his side.

The ACLU of Eastern Missouri, on behalf of Nix, the party's local leader, filed suit last week in U.S. District to force this St. Louis suburb to allow Nix to open his Nationalist Socialist White People's Party bookstore within the city limits.

Nix says city officials won't give him a license and it's unconstitutional.

The suit alleges that the city is discriminating against him and violating his first amendment right of free speech.

Nix claimed the city's action was based on the political and social nature of the materials and was therefore unconstitutional.
